

Evonik Showcases Innovation at AOCS 2017 Annual Meeting

PARSIPPANY, N.J., April 27, 2017 – Evonik Corporation’s oil chemistry expertise will be on display at next week’s American Oil Chemists Society (AOCS) Annual Meeting in Orlando, Fla., April 30–May 4. Scientists and researchers from Evonik, including representatives from the recently acquired Air Products’ Specialty Additives Business, will be on hand to highlight the newly combined portfolio of products for industries such as home care and industrial & institutional cleaning.

During the AOCS Annual Meeting, Evonik experts will be giving a number of presentations open to attendees including:

May 2, 8–8:20 A.M., Paquin 4 —Rick Theiner, Senior Principal Applications Chemist
“A New Approach to Developing Surfactants Soluble in High Alkaline Systems”

May 3, 9–9:20 A.M., Paquin 1 —Zheng Xue, Interfacial Research Chemist
“Sopborolipids in Hard Surface Cleaning Applications”

May 3, 3–3:30 P.M., Paquin 3 —Rick Theiner, Senior Principal Applications Chemist
“Driving Foam Performance with Surfactant Interactions”

On May 1, Rick Theiner will also chair a session on “New Technologies in Industry” in Paquin 4 at 2:00 P.M., while Mike Williams, Principal Research Chemist for Evonik, will chair a session called “Surfactants for the Non-Expert” at 8:00 A.M in Paquin 1.

“The AOCS Annual Meeting is a very important technical meeting for our Household Care business and it’s good to see our Evonik experts taking an active role in the conference activities,” said Deborah Anderson, Vice President Global Industrial & Institutional Product Line for Evonik. “Our product portfolio and technology capabilities have been expanded with our recent acquisition, and we are already seeing positive momentum in new business development and innovation resulting from our expanded portfolio and capabilities.”
